The Global Fellows Program

Funding undergraduate students to create projects that change the way we see the world!

In Year 1 Fellows complete an approved internship, service learning, or training

In Year 2 Fellows complete a project of their own design

CSULB is a globally-engaged university that holds in its mission a vision of 'changing lives by expanding educational opportunities, championing creativity, and preparing leaders for a changing world.' This includes developing global perspectives by continuously broadening and deepening curricular and co-curricular activities.

With the help of the Haglund Global Endowment and the Winans-Shaddle Fund, the Global Studies Institute will offer up to three undergraduate Global Studies Fellowships where students will imagine, create and execute a project of their own design to pilot an innovative new way for meeting this part of the campus mission and vision.

Global fellows will be global citizens dedicated to finding new and exciting ways to engage CSULB students in global learning activities on campus. They will create and pilot their project with the support of the Global Studies Institute, the guidance of the Institute's director, and support from additional university leaders as determined. Global Studies Fellows will be expected to attend monthly meetings for progress checks and trainings in leadership and project management. There will be additional opportunities provided to the Global Studies Fellows for gaining new knowledge about international education and networking with leaders on and off campus.

In a change from previous years, Fellows will engage in a two-year program (2023-24, 2024-25) and must commit to both years. Each Global Studies Fellow will receive $500 for their efforts each semester in addition to a $500 budget for piloting their individual projects.

Applications are due Friday, October 20, 2023
