

Kevin Poush is a CSULB alum and former member of the moot court team. As a mooter, he won multiple regional championships without losing a single round, won several speaker awards, and finished in the sweet 16 at Nationals. After CSULB, he attended Southwestern Law School in Los Angeles. At Southwestern, he graduated from its accelerated 2-year law school program called SCALE, excelled as a member of the school's Trial Advocacy Honors Program, and externed with the Downtown Los Angeles District Attorney's office in its Major Narcotics division and with Compton's Victim Impact Program. Following law school and passing the California State Bar, he worked as a civil defense trial attorney at Ford, Walker, Haggerty and Behar, and currently works as a civil trial attorney with Westford Law Group where he defends the interests of several companies as outside general counsel, and advocates for plaintiffs in personal injury cases. Kevin has been an assistant moot court coach since from the time he graduated law school. He appreciates a good roadmap and a good clear rule request.
